

Cruising Documents Guide

Needed To Board Ship

- Everyone will need a valid passport with an expiration date no sooner than 8/16/24 or if you are using a birth certificate:
 - It must be a state-certified birth certificate issued by the government. No “baby feet” certificates, no hospital birth certificates and no baptismal papers.
 - You must present the original copy, no photo copies.
 - You must also show a valid government issued photo ID, like a driver’s license.
 - Guests 15 and under do not need to show to show an ID, just the birth certificate.
- Puerto Rican birth certificates issued prior to July 1, 2010 are not valid. The government of Puerto Rico has partnered with VitalChek.com to issue new birth certificates.
- If you are using a birth certificate and your name has changed from the last name on your birth certificate IE: married names, you must bring:
 - a state, county or province-issued marriage license
 - divorce decree
 - government-issued name change document
 - official adoption papers
- Are you traveling with a grandchild, niece, nephew, or other child that you are not the guardian of? When a minor (age 17 and under) travels without their legal guardian, an accompanying adult must present a notarized form signed by the child’s guardian. This ensures the child has the guardian’s consent to leave the country and participate in release-form activities onboard.

Cruising Documents Guide

Needed To Board Ship

- If your child has a different last name than you, you will need to bring an official supporting document to help explain why the names are different. The supporting document must be the original, or a notarized copy. Some examples of valid supporting documents:
 - State, county or province-issued marriage license
 - Divorce decree
 - Government-issued name change document
 - Official adoption paper
- Don't Pack Your Docs! Please keep all travel documents on your person at the terminal; you'll need to present them at check-in. Have a carry on bag with you that has your Cruise docs and anything you may need before your cabin is ready:
 - Swimsuit if you want to hit the pools or hot tubs!
 - Medication you may need
 - Phone chargers
 - Sunscreen
